THE COMEBACK TRAIL

—10—
The comeback trail along which no heavyweight champion ever beat back today for about Jack Dempsey.

Dempsey who was champion from 1919 until 1926, will open the second phase of his exhibition tour in the city he came into fame overnight in 1915, when he beat Brennan so hard he broke his knee going down. He meets a cousin of "coasting" as part of his campaign toward the goal which added Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Jeffries.

Dempsey made 25 appearances in his first exhibition tour since August 12, 1931, with financial success. The present tour, with going to an end Dempsey's boxing career or will send him on to further achievements by no other heavyweight.

If Dempsey is kidding the public he has only about six months more to continue along. But time he must either prove that he is trying to get himself in condition to win back the title he held for seven years or go into retirement forever.

Dempsey is a man of moose. Today he'll tell his closest friends he is sincere in his attempt to fight again. Tomorrow he'll say he never intends to fight again.

It should be stated now that financial matters have nothing to do with Dempsey's future. In a lot of the boxing ring, Dempsey can live comfortably the rest of his days if he never gets another dollar from the boxing game.

Dempsey has an explosive instinct in his makeup which demands that he must be doing something. He can't remain idle. He only knows how to do one thing and that is fight. It is only natural that he should exhaust his fighting ability. Even at 36 he is retaining many of the qualities which enabled him to slaughter Jess Willard on a broiling July day in 1915.

Against Jack Roper, Los Angeles, and Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., Dempsey may appear only a shell of the fighter who once ruled the heavyweights with iron fists.

The result won't be the final answer to Dempsey's attempt to come back.

He met Roper twice in first exhibition tour and failed to make an impressive showing. It is not Dempsey's object to impress the public with his ability.

His main objective is to get him self into the best physical condition possible. I asked Dempsey if he tried to knock out every opponent he faced.

His answer was "Must I wonder a lot of nice fellows I strive to carry them along and work myself into condition. When I have a tough opponent facing me I cut one but there are certain times when it does me more good to carry an opponent along instead of trying to finish him."

Whether Dempsey can fight again or not is a question for debate. However one thing is certain he is more popular with the public now than he ever was as champion.

When he arrived in Chicago 1,500 persons waded through snow and sleet and waited for an hour to meet a late train. Dempsey saw him. When he worked over 4,000 persons crowded the small dingy upstairs enclosure. More than 1,000 were unable to get in. Kid Howard, manager of the gym said in 20 years he had never seen a crowd equal to that which stormed his place to see Dempsey.

LOWEST PAID WORKER

"She never earned any money—she lives on an Ohio farm, but she lives on almost every other farm. She is somebody's mother, maybe your own. She has earned nothing. No, but she has served 429,856 meals; she has made 1173 garments, $2,000 boxes of soap and 2,580 cakes; 7,842 pies; 1,500 gallons of lard; she has grown 1,422 bushels of vegetables, and has raised 75,600 chickens; churned 6,420 pounds of butter; put up 3,625 jars of preserves; scrubbed 17,825 articles of laundry; and she has put in 35,839 hours of sweeping and washing and scrubbing. At accepted prices for this work it is worth $115,000.50. She can't retire on her savings—she has kept on. Not earning. No. How do you define the ordinary woman's contributions to her family?"—Ext.

HEARD ON THE STREET

A spinster living in Canal Park was shocked at the language used by two men repairing telephone wires close to her house. She wrote to the Mayor on the matter, and the foreman was asked to report.

"This he did in the following way: 'He and Axel were on this job. I was up the pole, and accidentally let the tool fall on Hector. It went down his neck. Then he said: 'You really must be more careful, Axel.'"

What d'ye say, little lady?—It gave you a kick for a kiss.

No thank you; I can make more taking cantor oil.

The publisher of a small town newspaper was trying to get the general store owner to advertise.

"Merchant: I've been in this town thirty years and every man, woman and child knows where I am and what I sell. I don't need to advertise."

"Publisher:—Is that so? Tell me how long the Methodist church has been here?"

"Merchant:—Fifty years, I believe, Why?"

"Publisher:—Well, don't they still ring the bell every Sunday morning?"

"How do you sleep well?"

"I don't sleep at all doctor."

"But didn't you take the sleeping powder I gave you?"

"Yes, but when I thought that a little bit of powder could cost as much I couldn't sleep for thinking of it."

A father and his little boy were having a discussion on legal matters. "What is a retaining fee?" asked the little boy. His father replied: "A retaining fee is a fee paid to a lawyer before he will undertake to do any work for a client."

"Oh," replied the little boy, "like putting two bits in a meter before you get any gas?"

An American in England was giving some illustrations of the size of his country.

"You can board a train in the State of Texas at dawn," he said, impressively, "and twenty-four hours later you'll still be in Texas."

"Yes," said one of his English listeners with feeling, "we've got trains like that here, too."

Caller:—Good morning, I should like to pay my motor license. Const. Wallace:—Well, your first.

"Sincerely not the first to pay?"

"No, to say you'd like to."

A gentleman was seated behind a negro in a street car. In Memphis relates this incident: All seats were taken, when a young negro entered. The negro arose and offered her his seat.

"I hate to deprive you," she said gratefully as she took it.

"Thank you," said the "Miss," "I ain't no depriving, I insure you."

"Who is the best man usually at wedding?"

"The preacher; he gets the pro-

tre and takes no risk."

First Maid (talking about a party given the day before by her mistress)—"And they all came so innocuous and had on the grand old suits, and were the biggest diamonds."

Neighbor's Maid—And what did you say about it?"

First Maid—U—

An editor was dying, but when he was asked to sign, he said: "I can't sign on my breast, and said: 'Poor man! Circulation almost gone.'"

The dying editor shouted: "You're wrong! We have the largest circulation in the country."

"If I were trying to match polite society," said the woman customer, glaring at the shop assistant, "I'd have rather a job to find it here."

The assistant was equal to the occasion.

"Let me see your sample, madam," she said.

Dolly was just home after her first day at school.

"Well, darling," asked her mother, "what did they teach you?"

"Not much," replied the child. "I've got to go again."

A professor says the respect children used to have for their parents fifty years ago is not in evidence today. Maybe it's because the old folks are so old.

"I hope you don't think I'm con- sidered," said Herb after he had finished telling her about himself.

"Oh, no," she replied, "but I am just wondering how you can keep from giving three cheers when ever you talk at yourself in the mirror."

John Henry—Ah wondah wuz George Washington as honest as they say he wuz?

Mose Brown—Ah tell you, John Henry, George was de mos' honest man whut was ever born.

John Henry—Den how can dey close all de banks on his birthday?

An old maid went to have her picture taken and the photographer noticed her tying a piece of clothes line around the bottom of her skirt.

"What's the idea of that?" he asked. "I can't take your picture that way."

"You can't fool me, young man," said the old girl. "I know you see me upside down in that camera."
